PLAY GROUND OPENING BOARD OF TRUSTEES LAST FRIDAY PROVED A SUCCESS FROM EVERY POINT

MEET IN REGULAR WEEKLY SESSION

After delays occasioned by rain and the inability of the committee to get the grounds in proper condition Tropico's playgrounds were formally opened for the inspection and use of the public last Friday afternoon and evening. Much credit is due those in charge for the work, making possible that the children as well as grown-ups may have a chance to play and equipment to play with.

The festivities that opened up a track, football field, baseball diamond, basketball court, tennis court, croquet, quoits, swings, teaters, slides, etc., started at 3:30 when the pupils of Miss Saxon's school entertained by songs and dances in costumes representing flowers, while little Miss Mildred Moody, who was crowned queen of the May, set upon her rose-covered throne and welcomed the many spectators. A may-pole drill under the supervision of Miss Weatherby, music teacher, showed what the tots could do under efficient training.

Miss Frances Richardson, better known as the flag lady, to appropriate music and words, unfurled the flag with the rose petals hidden in its folds, which floated down upon the assembled crowd. The flag was presented to the play grounds by the N. P. Banks Womans Relief Corps. Miss Richardson gave a brief talk to the children upon the flag and its principles, after which followed the potato, cracker, sack and one-legged races.

At four o'clock a ball game between Glendale and Burbank was played on the diamond, which resulted in a score of 12 to 3 in favor of Glendale. The Glendale boys were spurred on to victory by the aid of their band which had accompanied them.

At 5 o'clock a cafeteria supper was served and the way in which the people of Tropico responded to this call showed their appetites had been whetted for the occasion. The committee worked like beavers for several hours satisfying the hungry crowd, while bonfires and laughter kept the workers and eaters happy.

The success of the undertaking was proven by the fact that over $75 was taken in, with only a small expense. This amount with others will be used in paying the bills that have accrued through making the play grounds a success.

Dr. Mabry who was appointed by the committee to arrange the grounds has worked hard, and what he has accomplished and what he still plans to accomplish will make an addition that will be worthy of any support that the citizens may be called upon for in the near future.

Mrs. Ella Richardson as chairman of the committee was assisted by Mrs. Dwight Griswold, Mrs. Charles A. Barker, Mrs. William A. Hough, Mrs. Mary Chadwick, Mrs. Robert Danner, Mrs. Charles Bruck, Mrs. C. Lake, Miss Saxon, Mrs. Moody, Mrs. A. J. Van Wie, Mrs. James Rich, girls of grammar school graduation class, and others who were pressed into service when the overflow came.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank everyone who so graciously gave their services and presence to the committee in order that the entertainment and Cafeteria Supper at the opening of the play grounds, Friday May 14, would prove such a success.

Mrs. Ella W. Richardson
Chairman of Committee.

C. W. Kimberly of Los Angeles purchased through the Davenport & Peters real estate agency a lot at the corner of Cerriots and San Fernando Road. Mr. Kimberly will build a residence there shortly.

Mr. Paine of Los Angeles Basket Company presented maps showing the closing of the lower end of Cypress street and the alley along the Southern Pacific tracks. Same was accepted and approved.

Jos. Griffin, representing signers of petition for employing new lawyer on West Acacia avenue improvement work, appeared and asked that the matter of the petition had been looked into during the past week and it was the opinion of the petitioners that so far no mistakes had been made in the proceedings and in lieu of this they, the petitioners, asked that the trustees disregard the petition presented and the city attorney go on as previously.

D. Griswold, representing the play ground committee, appeared and asked that the city employ a man to superintend the play grounds.

J. H. Oliver of the school board seconded the request. Dr. Mabry stated that an organization was to be started that would pay for such employment, provided that the city help. It was moved that the matter be laid over until next meeting.

City attorney reported that he had notified the Forest Lawn Cemetery Association that the year in which to remove the arch would expire the last day of May. He reported preparing and turning over to Dr. Mabry of deeds to be signed by Lupper & Robinson and H. P. and Lelah Larson for property for the extension of Acacia street to the east. That the Southern Pacific Railroad Company would report soon on negotiations of opening Brand boulevard across their tracks.

SPECTACULAR PAGEANT OFFICIAL PROGRAM OF BASEBALL SEASON WILL OPEN IN TROPICO SUNDAY AT 2:30

PLAY BALL!

Tropico's baseball season has opened and Tropico fans will have an opportunity to exercise their lung force again in rooting for the home team.

And best of all—all games this season will be played in Tropico—not across in Los Angeles.

The play grounds committee have tendered the diamond, built a large substantial grandstand and put in all necessary equipment to make it possible for a team to win honors.

The grounds at the Magnolia avenue school are in fine condition and fans have the assurance of seeing some games the coming season.

Probably owing to the conditions that existed on the old grounds, the crowds failed to attend last year. This season every thing is in shipshape and there is no excuse for not going.

Tropico's team last summer won the league cup with a perfect score, and they went up against some propositions, too. This year the boys have a reputation to maintain and they can't fall down.

Last year's financial report showed a small deficit. It costs money to maintain a team, and the expenses are paid by voluntary contributions. Let every fan attend the games this season and make the team possible.

A game was scheduled for last Sunday with the Southwesterners, but they failed to show up for some reason and the crowd of fans were content with a scrub game. On next Sunday the team will play a nine from Ramona Acres. The boys are anxious to make a good showing so everybody possible should attend. Capt. Al Gabag reports the following line-up for next Sunday's game, and states that all his men are in good condition. With plenty of support from the grandstand the game will be a walk-away.

The game will be called at 2:30.

Harry L. Edwards was a visitor in the city this week. Mr. Edwards was formerly editor of the Sentinel.

WATER COMPANY MOVES OFFICES TO TROPICO

The Title Guarantee and Trust Co. of Los Angeles, trustees for the bondholders of Glendale Consolidated Water Co., have moved their offices from Glendale to the First National Bank building, Tropico. This will be very convenient for Tropico in the payment of bills.

TUESDAY, JUNE 1 TO BE FESTIVAL DAY FOR TROPICO KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

It was fully decided at the K. P. lodge meeting last Monday evening to hold a carnival in Tropico on Tuesday, June 2.

At this time all Knights of Pythias of Tropico will entertain Pythians and friends from all surrounding cities.

The Glendale Knights have offered their support as well as the D. O. K. K.'s of Los Angeles. The latter will tender their band and be here in a body to help in the fun.

Street dancing, hall dancing, concessions, etc., will make up the program which is in the hands of committees.

It is hoped that arrangements can be perfected enough by next issue to give more details. Suffice to say that when the K. P.'s start anything a big time is assured.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO ENACT STORY OF CIVILIZATION

The story of civilization, from the dim distant days when the Oriental nations first awakened to begin the march of empires toward the west down to the glowing present in California, will be told in a monster four-days pageant to be held in Los Angeles by the school children of the city and county June 2 to 5.

Plans have been completed by the 1915 General Committee for the most comprehensive and magnificent spectacle ever presented in the west. The program as outlined includes:

June 2—"California, the Home of Youth," floral and allegorical parade by city school children.

June 3 and 4—"Westward, the Star of Empire Takes Its Way," magnificent pageant with 7,000 performers at Stadium, Thirty-fifth and Hooper avenue.

June 5—Morning, allegorical parade by county school children. Afternoon, pageant at Stadium. Evening, brilliantly beautiful electrical "Feast of Flowers."

Nearly 100 schools will participate in the opening parade with flower-decked floats, gaily costumed knights and ladies and poetic representations of youth and life in the Southland.

The great pageant will unfold the march of empires, beginning with the grotesque warriors of Japan and China, and continue through the various periods including the Greeks, Romans, Celts, Teutons, Norsemen, Franks, Moors, Pilgrims, Colonials, Indians, pioneers of the West, the Missions, miners, and ending with a magnificent tableau depicting California, the triumphal climax of civilization's pilgrimage to its highest development.

The fiesta will be the most elaborate ever attempted, and is expected to be the most attractive of the many entertainment features planned for expositions' year.

THE GLENDALE-TROPICO POULTRY ASS'N TO HOLD MEETING

The Glendale-Tropico Poultry and Pet Stock association will hold a meeting on Thursday evening, May 20, at the fire department hall in Glendale. L. E. Berkley and Vernon Carr, both well-known breeders will be the principal speakers of the evening. Every member is most earnestly urged to be present.

THE LUSITANIA.

Reprinted from the Christian Science Monitor,

Soldiers do not make war upon non combatants. The man who made that statement was one of the greatest soldiers of the world, Robert Lee, of Virginia. A man, who has been held, by a great authority, to be with Marlborough and Wellington, one of the three greatest English speaking generals who have ever lived. Before Lee's time, and up to the present, that dictum has held good. Unquestionably, at moments when men have been maddened, almost to the condition of animals, by furious assaults, most terrible things have happened in captured cities. The Spanish fury in Antwerp and the storming of Badajoz are cases in point. But for any nation deliberately and in cold blood to take the lives of a number of non combatants, for no military reason whatever, has been held to be without the bounds of civilized warfare.

War is a hideous anomaly. The war of Christian nations is one of the grimmest satires on the teaching of the New Testament. At the same time war in the past has been carried on with a certain amount of even stately courtesy, and everybody will remember the extraordinary scene when Count d'Auteroche and Lord Charles Hay, standing, hat in hand, at the head of the French and British guards, each requested the other side to fire first. The men who fought in these wars made rules which robbed war of some of its brutality, and among these laws were the laws with respect to merchant shipping. When the famous Lord Dundonald placed in the hands of the British admiralty a secret device for destroying the enemies' ships, it was put aside by that admiralty on the ground that it was immoral, even in war. In this way it came about that the seamen and statesmen of past generations determined that no mercantile ship should be sunk, unless the conditions absolutely necessitated it, and that no mercantile ship should be sunk at all until every person on board it had been removed to a place of safety. These rules were made by men who were fighting then, as now, in the moment of their country's fate. No danger threatens any belligerent power today such as threatened Europe when Alva was in the Lowlands, when Turenne and Luxembourg commanded the armies of the grand monarque, or when Napoleon was marching victoriously from Lodi to Austerlitz. During the whole of that period, however, the spirit which animated fighters was the spirit of Count d'Auteroche, "Gentlemen of the English Guard, please to fire first."

We regret that, in the present war, all this tradition should have been thrown overboard by the German government, and that there should have been introduced in its place the doctrine of "frightfulness." The doctrine of "frightfulness" is simply the attempt to win by terrorism instead of by sheer force of arms. During the months the war has lasted we have hesitated to speak of any of these things, and we have hesitated because we did not wish to judge hastily. When millions of men are engaged in a struggle to take one another's lives, things are done which could hardly be spoken of at other times. The suggestions of fear or the intoxication of blood communicates itself to them, and they are moved to do the most hideous acts through that same mesmerism, which has before now found its voice in the awful cry of a routed army "Sauve-qui-peut." Nobody knows better than the student of Christian Science the scientific causes and effects of such demoralization, and nobody is able to make anything like the same comprehending excuse for it. There comes, however, a day when it would appear impossible not to attempt to stem the tide of hatred and recklessness, which must be more disastrous to him who is guilty of it, than to anyone else. The sinking of the "Lusitania" seems to mark such a period in the present war. The time has come when it is necessary to speak plainly.

When the first terrible stories of atrocities in Belgium reached us, we felt it would be improper to prejudice the case. When the destruction of Louvain and the demolition of Rheims cathedral took place, we satisfied ourselves with recording the fact. At the very worst some great buildings had been destroyed, and great buildings have been destroyed in nearly all wars. Until the war was over and it was possible to properly weigh the accusations involved in this act, we felt it was wiser to say nothing. When the air raids began to take place, and when bombs were dropped on defenseless hamlets and country towns, we realized that it was possible for men engaged in such work to make mistakes, and though it was difficult to see how such mistakes could keep occurring, we still suspended judgment. When the bombardment of fishing villages took place by battleships miles out at sea, we could only trust that a mistake had been made in trying to find fortified positions. When Germany allied herself with a power which preached the unthinkable horrors of a "holy war," we in no way associated her with Turkey. Even when the submarine campaign was entered upon, and the using of poisonous gases was resorted to, although the first of these was against all rules of civilized warfare, and the latter contrary to the agreement of the power indulging in it, we waited for the German government to justify its action. When the "William P. Frye" was sunk, we accepted the German statement of an error of judgment. When the "Falaba" was torpedoed, we agreed to the Washington policy of not judging without absolute evidence. The sinking of the "Lusitania" makes it impossible to continue such a course any longer. It is not that the sinking of the "Lusitania" is, morally speaking, worse than some other things which have occurred. It is that, in the most indefensible and most defiant manner, it sums up the determination of the German government to set the imperial seal on "frightfulness."

There is nothing to be gained by relating the facts of the case, which by this time are known to every civilized country and some uncivilized ones. But it is necessary to dwell for a moment on the absolute futility of the act. No military purpose whatever has been accomplished by the destruction of some hundreds of non combatants deliberately and in cold blood. The value of the ship, in the cost of war expenditure, is a bagatelle, and like everything else of that nature, is absolutely immaterial in the light of the fact that the loser will be compelled to pay the war bill in any case. It is quite certain that the English people will not be terrified into surrender through the loss of a certain number of lives, which, hideous as it may seem, are as nothing in the butchery of the present war. It is ridiculous to say that the ship was torpedoed because it was carrying munitions of war, for the simple reason that the fishing boats, which have been torpedoed, trawling off the English coast, were not carrying munitions of war. As a matter of fact the "Lusitania" was engaged on internationally a perfectly legitimate voyage. She had a perfectly legitimate right to carry passengers and to carry munitions of war. She was not sailing to a blockaded port, or to a country which could by any exercise of imagination be described as blockaded, and she was carrying a perfectly legitimate cargo. It is true that she belonged to the British auxiliary fleet, but such an argument would justify the sinking in the same way, of the great mercantile fleets of Europe. It is, of course, notorious that she had never been taken over as an armed cruiser but had been employed from first to last as a merchant liner. Whilst to maintain that merchant ships which have attempted to save themselves by ramming attacking submarines must be regarded as ships of war, is simply to maintain that no civilian possesses the right of self-defense. It was open to the Kaiser's officers to have captured her under the rules of warfare. It was open to them to have conveyed her to one of their own ports, if they were able to, and in the event of their not being able to, to have sunk her, after first removing the crew and passengers. Instead of this she was sunk by a deliberately advertised plan, without warning and in disregard of every law of war and of humanity. We believe that possibly the worst penalty which the German nation will pay will be the condemnation of civilization for an act of such absolute futility from the point of view of military effect. The nations at war cannot do more than they are doing. It remains for the governments of those neutral countries, whose citizens have lost their lives, bound on a perfectly legitimate voyage, to decide what they will do. The world will wait to see, and the world will judge by the event. For the first time the question has been taken out of the realm of the diplomatic controversy. An issue has been presented which is perfectly unquestionable, and to which an answer must be returned.

The last thing we have any desire to do is to add to the difficulties of the President of the United States. We are convinced that he will deal with the matter promptly and wisely. Still less is it our wish to in any way stir political passion. We know that no question ever yet has been settled by passion or by force. But we believe that the people of the United States, standing outside the storm of mental conflict which today is convulsing Europe, can, by a firmness of purpose and an appreciation of the facts, do much to quiet the passions of the world, and to put a stop to methods, which even undisciplined human consciousness has hitherto regarded as illegitimate warfare.

Opening Day at Panama-Pacific Exposition Broke All Exposition Attendance Records

ALL attendance records for expositions were broken at the opening of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco on Feb. 20. Vast crowds thronged the grounds when President Wilson pressed the button in Washington, and each day since the attendance has been enormous. The huge buildings and beautiful thoroughfares hummed with activity and have continued to do so.

The Exposition has already demonstrated at this early date that it will be a great success in every way.

Long Live the King!

By MOSS.

SYLLA, the Roman dictator, abdicated in 70 B. C.

From that time down through the whirl of history's pages many sovereigns have joined the DOWN and OUT CLUB.

For instance, just to brush up your memory, Charles V. quit as emperor of Spain in 1555, King James II. of England fled in 1688, and Napoleon was tumbling off his pedestal in 1815.

Some rulers went VOLUNTARILY; some were FORCED OUT.

ABDICATION generally COMES HARD. There's the case of HUERTA, for example.

But the hardest monarch to eradicate is HABIT.

HABIT may be GOOD ruler of one's life or the WORST possible.

The CARELESS, RAPID FIRE METHOD of READING NEWSPAPERS is a SLOWLY HABIT. If you have it STOP IT.

Read this paper THOROUGHLY. It takes EARNEST THOUGHT, TIME and MONEY to PRODUCE IT. Our business men spend THOUSANDS in it to keep you POSTED and EARN YOUR TRADE.

Turning a CARELESS HABIT into a CAREFUL HABIT will prove a PAYING REFORMATION.

There was a man in our town,
Who thought him wondrous wise;
He wore a hat upon his crown,
So much too large in size.
The reason why this funny man
Made such a sorry sight,
Was that he tried a silly plan
His neighborhood to fight.
He felt himself so far above
The town in which he stayed,
That in his heart was found no love
For it, even when he prayed.
His head was hard, his brain was small,
He was so very dull,
He scarcely had a mind at all,
His head was mostly skull.
Another man with modest mien,
Lived close beside this one.
His brain alert, his mind was keen,
His smile was like the sun.
He knew he loved his town,
He ever helped his neighbor when
He found that he was down.
This man was ever on the go,
Delighted with his fate.
He did his best for Tropico,
The people thought his great."

Just to think if Columbus had not discovered America, we would now be over on the other side in this mix up.

Even the militiamen couldn't have brought about a greater smash than the one in Europe.

What would have happened at Liege, if Belgium had been devoted to militarism all these years instead of to neutrality and peace?

The Musse too, seems to be a River of Doubt just now.

MARKETING WORLD'S GREATEST PROBLEM

WE ARE LONG ON PRODUCTION,
SHORT ON DISTRIBUTION.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The economic distribution of farm products is today the world's greatest problem and the war, while it has brought its hardships, has clearly emphasized the importance of distribution as a factor in American agriculture and promises to give the farmers the co-operation of the government and the business men the solution of their marketing problem.

This result will, in a measure, compensate us for our war losses, for the business interests and government have been in the main assisting almost exclusively on the production side of agriculture. While the department of agriculture has been dumping tons of literature on the farmer telling him how to produce, the farmer has been dumping tons of products in the nation's garbage can for want of a market.

The World Will Never Starve.

At no time since Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden have the inhabitants of this world suffered from lack of production, but some people have gone hungry from the day of creation to this good hour for the lack of proper distribution. Slight variations in production have forced a change in diet and one locality has felt the pinch of want, while another surfeited, but the world as a whole has never been a land of plenty.

We now have less than one-tenth of the tillable land of the earth's surface under cultivation, and we not only have this surplus area to draw on but it is safe to estimate that in case of dire necessity one-half the earth's population could at the present time knock their living out of the trees of the forest, gather it from wild vines and draw it from streams. No one should become alarmed; the world will never starve.

The consumer has always feared that the producer would not supply him and his fright has found expression on the statute books of our states and nations and the farmer has been urged to produce recklessly and without reference to a market, and regardless of the demands of the consumer.

Back to the Soil.

The city people have been urging each other to move back to the farm, but very few of them have moved. We welcome our city cousins back to the soil and this earth's surface contains 16,092,160,000 idle acres of tillable land where they can make a living by tickling the earth with a forked stick, but we do not need them so far as increasing production is concerned; we now have all the producers we can use. The city man has very erroneous ideas of agricultural conditions. The commonly accepted theory that we are short on production is all wrong. Our annual increase in production far exceeds that of our increase in population.

The World as a Farm.

Taking the world as one big farm, we find two billion acres of land in cultivation. Of this amount there is approximately 750,000,000 acres on the western and 1,260,000,000 acres on the eastern hemisphere, in cultivation. This estimate, of course, does not include grazing lands, forests, etc., where large quantities of meat are produced.

The world's annual crop approximates fifteen billion bushels of cereals, thirteen billion pounds of fibre and sixty-five million tons of meat.

The average annual world crop for the past five years, compared with the previous five years, is as follows:

	Past Half	Previous Half
Crops	Decade	Decade
Corn (Bu.)	3,934,174,000	3,403,655,000
Wheat (Bu.)	3,522,769,000	3,257,526,000
Oats (Bu.)	4,120,017,000	3,508,315,000
Cotton (Bales)	19,863,800	17,541,200

The world shows an average increase in cereal production of 13 per cent during the past decade, compared with the previous five years, while the world's population shows an increase of only three per cent.

The gain in production far exceeds that of our increase in population, and it is safe to estimate that the farmer can easily increase production 25 per cent if a remunerative market can be found for the products. In textile fibres the world shows an increase during the past half decade in production of 15 per cent against a population increase of three per cent.

The people of this nation should address themselves to the subject of improved facilities for distribution.

Over-production and crop mortgage force the farmers into ruinous competition with each other. The remedy lies in organization and in co-operation in marketing.

A Story of Heredity

By EUNICE BLAKE

Mrs. Waterbury employed a maid who was not only comely, but there was about her an air of one to the manner born. So impressed was the lady with the belief that Silvia had good blood in her veins that she asked the girl to tell her something about her origin. Silvia refused.

"Where did you spend your childhood?" asked Mrs. Waterbury.

"I cannot tell you," was the reply, while Silvia hung her head.

"Don't you remember your parents?"

"I do not."

"How long have you been in service?"

"Two years."

Mrs. Waterbury gave up trying to find her maid's antecedents, but she was not convinced that she had been born a servant. Silvia's case interested her the more because she reminded her of a woman she had met when she was entering society. This Mrs. Marshall had been at the time a woman of forty and had become a social leader from the fact of a certain courtliness there was about her.

What it was in the servant that reminded her of the high bred woman Mrs. Waterbury could not tell. Mrs. Marshall had been socially prominent a quarter of a century before. Mrs. Waterbury, who was twenty years her junior, had not been intimate with her and had seen her only at certain functions.

Silvia came to be an important person to her employer other than as a servant. Arthur Waterbury, the latter's son, came home from college and had not been in the house a day before his mother noticed that he had become engrossed with her maid. Arthur struggled against the passion till withholding expression of it became unbearable, then confessed it to Silvia. His mother overheard him doing so.

"You were not born a servant," said Arthur. "No such high bred manner could come from a plebeian; it is hereditary."

"I am a servant and nothing else," Silvia replied.

"Whatever you are I cannot help loving you. I do love you, and you shall be my wife."

"I will not be your wife, because to marry me would deprive you of the social position which is your right. You would always be ashamed of me, and I would drag you down."

Mrs. Waterbury heard no more. She said nothing to her son about what she had overheard, but the next day did all she could to save her son from a misfortune. She sent the girl away and did not tell Arthur where she had gone.

Several months passed. Mrs. Waterbury saw that her son was not the same man he had been before he came home from college. Ambition had left him; he took no interest in anything. He had experienced a grand passion, and the breaking with his mate had blighted his life.

Then came a coincidence—a chain of coincidences. If there were no coincidences there would be no stories.

Dr. Shotwell, Mrs. Waterbury's family physician, one day drove up to her house, rang and was admitted.

"Why, doctor?" said the lady, "what brings you? We are all well here. Surely you must have called socially and are welcome socially."

"I have called to tell you of a singular happening."

"Let me hear it."

"You remember the pretty maid you had here for a time. I have often seen her here and noticed how little like a servant she appeared—that ladylike air!"

"Yes, we all noticed that," interrupted the lady somewhat impatiently.

"Well, on leaving you she at once found a position in a family I also attend professionally. She is ill, and I was called in to treat her. In applying a hot poultice between her shoulder blades I noticed a birthmark shaped something like a Maltese cross. I had reason to remember that birthmark, for I had attended the mother of the child who bore it eighteen years before under peculiar circumstances. The woman was the daughter of a social leader, and I had not heard that she had been married, though I was afterward furnished with proof that she was. At any rate, the accouchement was secret."

"The name of this family, doctor?" Mrs. Waterbury broke in.

"Marshall!"

"Marshall! Do you mean to tell me that Silvia is the granddaughter of Mrs. James Osgood Marshall, who flourished socially twenty-five years ago?"

"I do. Julia Marshall, the daughter, married clandestinely. There was trouble in the family, and her mother withdrew from society. Julia's marriage was never published. The child was consigned to a foundlings' home and was lost to her parents, both of whom died soon after she was born."

When Silvia recovered her health she was removed to the house of her former mistress not as a servant, but as the betrothed of Arthur Waterbury. Her identity was established, and she came into possession of certain property that had been left her, but could not be paid since no trace of her could be found.

Since Mrs. Waterbury noticed in her daughter-in-law the manner of a woman she had not herself seen in more than twenty years she has become a strong believer in heredity.
